is responsible for all the life, action, changes developments and progress in the universe. He knows that matter is inert that it has neither power of motion, increase, change, or development into anything else. That it has no thought, no reasoning power, no soul. Yet he chooses to believe that this material, which

s responsible for all the life and developmen and progress there is in the world. We prefer to believe-it is the more rational it is the more reasonable—that a great First Cause, who is omniprescent, omniscient and emnipotent has breathed life into this world reserves it and has laid down laws to control, ntinue and develop it, and that He has en dowed the highest order of His creation on earth with a mind that is capable of the most extraordinary development.

We believe further that He rules over and cares for all. lieve in his blind, irresponsible something that is neither mind nor spirit, and that de elops because of some blind, inherent, ind finable influence in itself; this is his god, for his theory will not let him accept the thought that it has derived life or derives influer rom without itself. But is a man warranted to such a blind faith in such a dead God? Revelation is the imparting to others wha fleft to their own resources. Man was created with capacities for growth and development; he was given the finest of organizations; he was given a hungering for this campaign, we could carry every knowledge; but if there had been no help from without, no training from without, no teacher from without, no knowledge from without, he would have ended his existence in his helpless infancy.

It is, therefore, the plainest teaching that man's improvement has come by revelation and this being true it has not come by evolution. As well may the clay say to the potter "I formed myself into this beautiful utensil."
But revelation and Divine revelation are two things. Yes, different in this, that Divine revelation includes all revelation; as well that which came through the prophets and holy men and the Divine Savior, as that which comes to and through the operations of the mind. All must come either from the source of no life or power, or from the source of all life and power. It is not more unreasonable to believe that God gave men supernatural revelations in the believe that the babe is given food which is Peace to his ashes.

The fact that man was given a monitorconscience—is evidence that there is a more ordered them to haul down their rebel rule and a moral responsibility. The fact that he may and does override and pervert that conscience is evidence that he needs a further help, a need which a Divine revelation would supply.

As to the arguments establishing the truthfulness of Divine revelation, they are manifold and to millions of souls they have been saving and satisfying. It is not our province or pur from Santiago, on leave of absence, pose to attempt to speak of these here.

But the editor of the Citizen seeks to break the force of the argument we advanced to prove that Divine revelation has done most o promote the progress and enlightenmen of the world, to-wit, that the advanced and enlightened and ruling nations of the world and Rome and other nations that were no Christian nations, and he says that the aver age intelligence of those nations was on a lane with the intelligence of our Supreme

No nation that was ever penned off to itself The editor of the Urbana Citizen writes and depended upon its own protoplasm, and its again to prove that all life has evolved from own evolution, ever showed such progress as these. The citation of Greece and Rome powers and necessity for improvement and advancement, but he fails to tell us whether therefore, only emphasizes the fact that progression comes not from within but from without-as all knowledge has from the beginning of Creation. Men have sought through science and rea son to account for the origin of life, and the

My little six-months old girl had Eczema. We used all kinds of remedies, but she kept getting worse. I used to wrap her hands up, and to dress her, had to put her on the table. I could not hold her, she would kick and scream, and, when she could, she would teacher face and arms almost to pieces. Four loxes of Curicuma (cintment), two cakes of Curicuma Soar, and Curicuma Rissolvent cured her, and no traces are left. cured her, and no traces are left. Feb.7,'98. Mrs. G. A. CONRAD, Lisbon, N. H. SPEEDT CORE TREATHENT. - Warm boths with Currecura Soar, gentle ancientings with Currecura (cintment), and mild doses of Currecura Resouvent. East throughout the world. POTTER DEDG AND CREM.
